Cruise ship crashes into lock wall, passengers injured

(CNN) - A cruise ship struck a wall in the Eisenhower Lock in upstate New York on Thursday night, injuring some passengers, the U.S. Coast Guard said. Michael Lecuyer, with St. Lawrence County Emergency Services, told CNN that 17 people suffered very minor injuries. CNN affiliate WWNY said the injured, accompanied by 13 of their relatives, were taken off the ship, the Saint Laurent, to be checked out at a local hospital. All were treated and discharged before being brought back to the ship early Friday. There were 274 people, including passengers and crew, aboard the 286-foot cruise ship when it hit the lock wall in the Saint Lawrence Seaway in Massena, the Coast Guard said in a news release. As of 6 a.m. ET Friday, the cruise ship remained in the lock and all the passengers are still on board, Lecuyer said. Inspectors will assess the damage during the morning and determine if and when the ship will be able to leave, he said. A Coast Guard boat was deployed to the scene late Thursday from Alexandria Bay, New York. The cause of the collision is still being investigated. The Saint Lawrence Seaway extends more than 2,000 miles from the Atlantic Ocean to the head of the Great Lakes. The Eisenhower Lock is one of two U.S. locks on the 10-mile-long Wiley-Dondero Canal, which provides access to Lake St. Lawrence.

Thailand confirms first MERS case in visitor from Oman

(BBC) - Thailand has confirmed its first case of Middle East Respiratory Syndrome (MERS), the deadly virus that has killed 24 people in South Korea. The man whose name has not been released is now in quarantine at an infectious diseases facility outside the capital Bangkok. Thai health officials said the 75-year-old from Oman was seeking treatment for a heart problem in Bangkok. Nearly 60 people who came into contact with the patient have been identified. That includes three relatives who travelled with him on the plane. Thailand is a medical tourism hub, popular with patients from the Middle East. "We advise the public not to panic because the patient and his family members were separated since the beginning," Thailand's Health Minister Rajata Rajatanavin said. "Our system is ready and we are monitoring the cases closely." South Korea on Friday reported the 24th death from Mers and said there were now 166 people infected. Thousands are still in quarantine. The number of new cases in recent days has been low and World Health Organization (WHO) chief Margaret Chan expressed optimism over containing the outbreak being contained there. South Korean health official Kwon Deok-cheol told reporters Mers had "levelled off" but added: "We need to watch further spread, further cases from so-called intensive control hospitals." The outbreak in South Korea began in May with a 68-year-old South Korean man who had travelled to the Middle East.

- Demobilization and fire suppression repair plans are being initiated.
- Resources: 130 personnel assigned

There are no requests for assistance or unmet needs.

Cal OES Duty Officers are monitoring the situation and will provide updates as they become available.

SITUATION SUMMARY

Air Quality

- Recent dry lightning strikes have caused many small fires in the Six Rivers and Shasta-Trinity National Forest as well as State Responsibility Areas.
- Current weather forecasts show the recent low pressure moving out of the area and replaced by a warming trend with drier weather and moderate to light winds over the area.
- The Saddle Fire, located in the Shasta-Trinity National Forest near the town of Hyampom, continues to produce smoke in nearby communities. At this time, smoke is laying in valleys but may lift and transport to further locations throughout the day. Satellite images show smoke traveled north toward Willow Creek and to the southeast past the Hyampom area.
- In Del Norte County, the Buckskin Fire located near Cave Junction, Oregon is producing smoke impacts in downwind areas southwesterly of the fire. Satellite imagery indicates that Smith River could be in the path of the smoke. Crescent City may also be experiencing smoke from the fire.
- Forecasting smoke impacts can be challenging as smoke can vary widely within just a few miles as Humboldt, Del Norte and Trinity Counties contain mountains, valleys, and a thousand different air flow patterns.
- Further Air Quality information will be provided to the public as updated information becomes available.
- For 24-hour Air Quality Information:
 - NCUAQMD's hotline toll-free at 1-866-BURN-DAY (1-866-287-6329)

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Stubborn onshore flow will allow low clouds to persist along the immediate northwest California coast each night and morning into next week. Farther inland, warm temperatures will continue with mostly clear and dry conditions.

Medford Weather:

Dry weather conditions along with warm inland temperatures will persist through today. A slight cooling trend is then expected for the latter half of the weekend into early next week as an upper level trough moves into the Pacific Northwest. Warmer weather will then return by the middle of next week

Reno Weather:

Above average temperatures and dry conditions will persist through early next week. Typical afternoon and evening zephyr winds will prevail today and Monday, with stronger winds and increased fire danger on Sunday as low pressure moves into the Pacific Northwest. A strong warming trend is expected for the middle to end of next week along with much lighter winds.

San Francisco Weather:

Dry weather conditions along with warm inland temperatures will persist through today. A slight cooling trend is then expected beginning Sunday and continuing into early next week as an upper level trough moves into the Pacific Northwest. Warmer weather will then return by the middle of next week.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Warm and dry weather will continue for the next week. Warmer today but cooler temperatures Sunday and Monday with daytime highs near to slightly below normal. Warming trend begins Tuesday bringing another round of hot weather.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will continue to bring dry conditions and above normal temperatures through the weekend. A subtle cooling trend will take place over central California during the first half of next week.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure aloft will continue to bring hot temperatures to inland areas through Sunday, with triple digit highs possible in the warmest valleys. High pressure aloft should weaken with an upper level trough expected by mid-week. There should be a gradual cooling trend for Monday through Friday. Marine layer clouds will affect the coastal areas during the night and morning hours to bring some cooling to these areas through the period.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

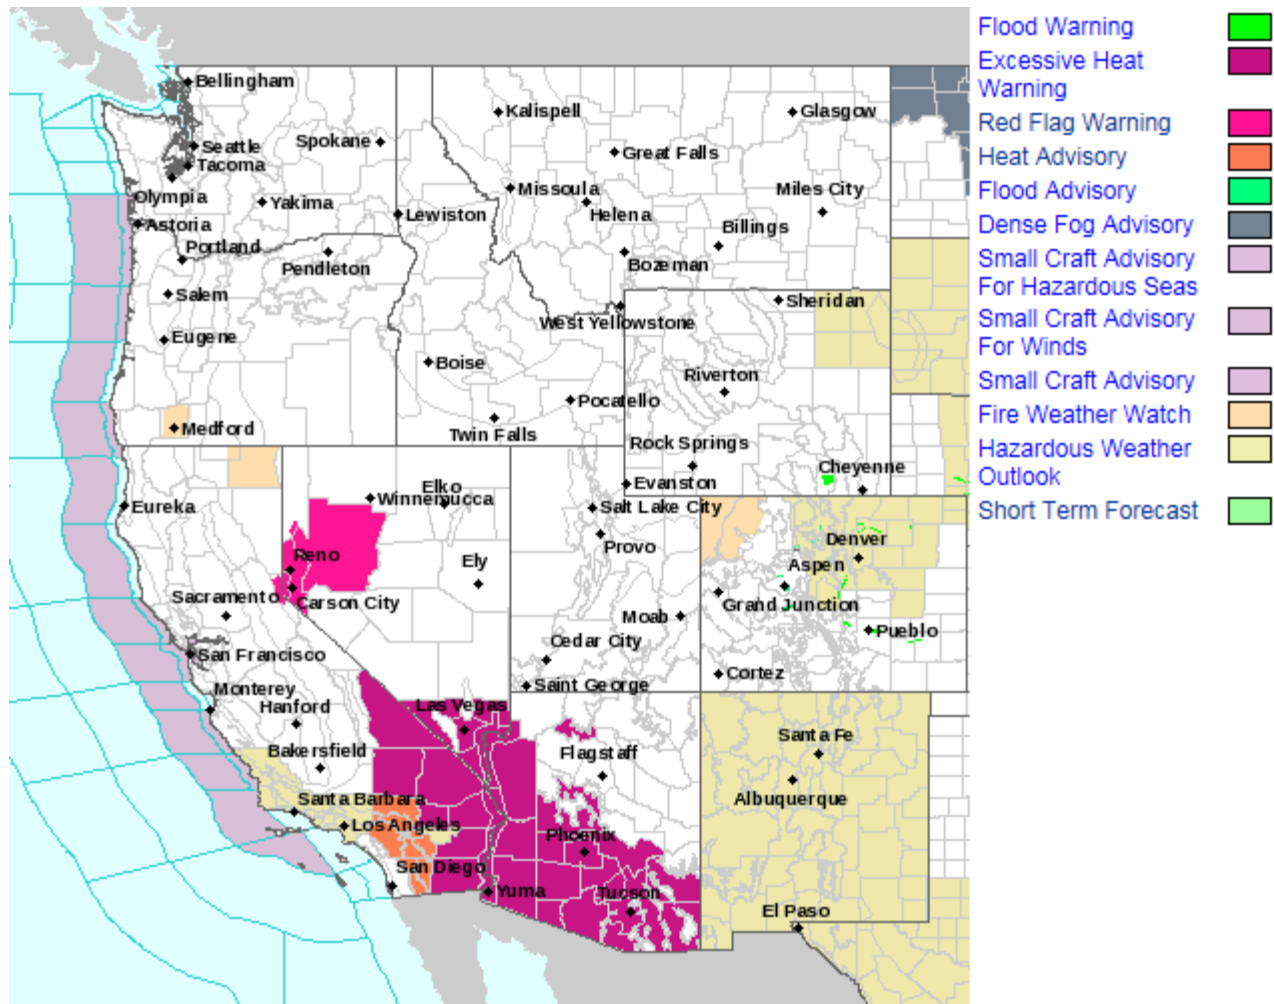

Hot weather will continue through the weekend with high pressure over southern California. Areas of dense fog will continue early this morning but quickly clear out after sunrise. The weather will turn gradually cooler next week as the high drifts east and the marine layer deepens.

Southeast California Weather:

Dry weather with excessive afternoon heat will continue through early next week, with high temperatures in the 110 to 115 degree range on the lower deserts. Humidity will increase somewhat over the weekend. More significant increases in moisture, along with lower temperatures, are expected later next week with a slight chance of thunderstorms over southeast Arizona beginning Tuesday. Storm chances expand to the higher terrain of south-central Arizona by Thursday.
